Four reps elected

In the Students' Society by-elections held yesterday, four candidates were elected to Council. Will Hoffman will represent the Arts and Science students; Donald Schreiber and Harn Yawngwe were elected from the Engineering faculty; and Gundars Kajaks won in Architecture.

Only 1,100 students turned out at the polls.

Arts and Science

Will Hoffman captured 237 of the 543 votes cast in the Arts and Science election. George Freedman placed second with 197 votes and Gerry Vazquez received 109.

Hoffman ran on a platform that dealt with Council's lack of political responsibility, expressed strong opposition to the fee hike, and called for the drafting of a new constitution providing for broader participation of students.

After his election, Hoffman made the following statement:

"I feel particularly happy about the victory today because of the support given to the ideas that I expressed. I feel that the idea that Council does not deal with issues of real concern to students has been endorsed by my election."

"It is in part an indication that policies like that of the ASUS—to have student government bodies concern themselves with the larger issue of the student in the community—have been endorsed. I think that attacks on Liberation School and other such groups that try to deal with the inadequacy of McGill's academic structure and offering were also reflected in today's balloting. "Though for a by-election it was a fair turn-out, I think the fact that most of the students didn't vote shows that the issues on which I ran were valid: that Students' Council has not exhibited political responsibility and dealt with the issues that reflect the real concerns of students."

"The victory is not mine alone, but rather that of the large group of students who worked collectively on my behalf and helped me articulate the issues."

Engineering

Harn Yawngwe and Donald Schreiber won the Engineering seats on Council with 152 and 139 votes respectively. George Ahlu picked up 94 votes and Jim Richards received 89.

Yawngwe campaigned for fiscal autonomy of the Engineering Undergraduate Society and increased communication between the EUS and the Students' Council.

In his statement after the election, Yawngwe said: "All that I can say is that I hope I can accomplish what I said I would work for in my platform. I am optimistic that things will work out. I hope that I can really communicate with the engineers. I would like to thank everyone who

Constitution revision may bypass students

Citing their discontent with the Students' Society as it is now, student politicians last night decided to form a seven-member Constitutional Committee, empowered to produce a new constitution by January 31, 1973.

According to a motion passed at a meeting of the Joint Committee—which comprises the Board of Regular Committees, Students' Council, and student senators—the Constitutional Committee can take its proposals for amending the constitution directly to Senate, bypassing the students. This action would disregard the procedures for constitutional change laid down in the present constitution; these procedures require a campus-wide referendum, with at least 20 per cent of the students voting, for any constitutional change.

Law Representative Steve Strasser, who proposed the motion, defended the move by saying, "Everyone agrees that the constitution is lousy, but they all say we have to work within it. I say we should change it outside the constitution as it is now."

Strasser also argued that student apathy would make it impossible to get a 20 per cent turnout for a referendum.

Will Hoffman, newly elected Arts and Science Representative, proposed an amendment to Strasser's motion asking the Joint Committee to declare itself against any move to change the constitution by any procedure not set down in the present constitution.

Hoffman argued that to give the Constitutional Committee the power to bypass students means "to give away student autonomy and to give Senate the power to decide what is best for students."

He called Strasser's move "undemocratic" and explained, "No

Black group chartered amid controversy

Students' Council passed the constitution of the Black Students' Union (BSU) last night and thus set a precedent in the funding of a political organization on campus.

Arts representative Nigel Gibson, in his role as Constitutions Director, presented BSU's constitution, but it was only after some debate, with strong attacks coming from Management representative Bennet Little, that it was finally passed.

Of particular controversy were the BSU's stated positions "against imperialism" and in support of "all progressive, black and Third World liberation movements."

Even with the constitution approved, however, a problem still remained.

The financial regulations of the Students' Society specify that it cannot fund political or religious organizations. This could leave the passing of the BSU's budget in some doubt.

Students' Society President Gabor Zinner suggested that the problem be put off until next week, but George Archer, newly-elected Post Graduate representative opposed the postponement of the issue. "Black students have been pushed around for two years," he said, "and we want this decided now."

Nigel Gibson then proposed a motion to delete the restrictive regulation from the Students' Society's financial rules. After a short discussion, with opposition again coming from Bennet Little, the motion carried.

POLITICAL SCIENCE SEMINAR

Political Science staff seminar today at 3:30 pm, L425, on "Aspects of Afrikaner Political Thought", with John Shingler.

Hoechst thinks ahead

Helping Build Canada

Products and ideas from Hoechst have touched and improved the quality of people's lives in every area around the world, in a hundred countries on six continents. As an affiliate of the worldwide Hoechst organization, Canadian Hoechst Limited has a full century of research and achievement to draw upon. In Canada, Hoechst is an autonomous company employing Canadians to serve Canadian needs.

Hoechst in Canada concerns itself with supplying both the present and future needs of Canadians. The range of products and services covers the spectrum through industrial chemicals, dyestuffs, plastics, printing plates, human and veterinary medicines, pharmaceuticals, and textile fibres. Hoechst products and services, Hoechst techniques and know-how in these fields, combined with a large international fund of experience, have given the company a reputation for expertise which takes constant striving to live up to. Hoechst thinks ahead.

Hoechst Research Increases Highway Safety

Early perception of danger points and easy identification of traffic signs so that their messages can be instantly recognized, are two of the greatest problems of road safety.

The fluorescent colours now used to mark highways often fade after a short time. But Hoechst research has developed persistent fluorescent dyestuffs which have the valuable attributes of maximum lightfastness and striking visual impact. The qualities of these dyestuffs improve identification of highway danger spots, men working, traffic signs, railway crossing and unlit roads. In fact there is an almost inexhaustible number of identification uses. This is a major contribution by Hoechst to future road safety.

Ahead through systems thinking

The new fluorescent dyestuffs are the result of Hoechst know-how and experience in many fields. They are the product of collaboration between physicists and technicians engaged in research into dyestuffs and plastics.

Systems thinking is the Hoechst strategy. Research, development and product experience in many areas are concentrated on the solution of specific problems.

To keep ahead — to solve the problems of today and tomorrow — Hoechst employs 10,300 people in research and development with a research investment of more than 150 million dollars.

worked for me, and I will try to live up to the confidence that they have expressed in me."

Donald Schreiber, who ran on a platform calling for decentralized student government, fiscal autonomy, and increased student services and activities, said after his victory:

"I would like to thank all those who voted for me. None of the candidates ran a full-fledged campaign—we had no posters, and we did not have a chance to talk to very many of the students. This illustrates that the students voted on the basis of what the candidates have done, not promised."

Architecture

Gundars Kajaks defeated Lenny Wexler in the Architecture race by obtaining 51 of the 83 votes cast. Kajaks said in his platform that "we must work within the Council for a more representative system or opt for autonomy."

He also said that "our role in Council is a futile one."

He did not attend last night's Council meeting and thus was unavailable for comment on his victory.

matter how representative a student body may be, an important decision like amending the constitution should still be taken to the students as a whole."

Hoffman's amendment was defeated, and Strasser's original motion passed with a small majority.

The seven-member committee will be made up of representatives from the various faculties plus one member at large. Students' Society President Gabor Zinner was chosen at the meeting to be the member at large.

Sports

Skydiving

by f. fubar

Skydiving? It is a substance or means with which you can extract copious quantities of virtually any pleasure you can imagine.

Skydiving is a sport of superlatives. It has an intensity not found in any other discipline. The degree of joy, beauty, excitement, exhilaration and personal satisfaction is magnified to an amazing degree by the very nature of the sport.

Whatever you are searching for in a sport, skydiving can give it to you, and more of it than anything else.

Are you a skier or a motorcyclist, where acceleration, speed, and the incredible sensation of a controlled tight turn are the essence of the sport? Well, consider being able to accelerate to 120 miles an hour in twelve seconds, or to decelerate to 20 in a few more. Your cumbersome skis or cycle have been eliminated. Your very body is your machine. Your movements create immediate reactions. You are, in reality, flying.

Are you one who is reflective, loving solitude and beauty? Can you imagine hopping into the blue with only yourself from horizon to horizon? As you float down through clouds and blue sky, totally weightless and frictionless, physically free and unencumbered for the first time, your mind cannot help but become liberated also. Looking down upon an autumn panorama, where the hills look on fire, with a crystal clarity never before achieved, can be almost overpowering.

If you are the gregarious sort you can take the plunge with several of your friends, hold hands, take a kiss, pass a baton, and almost any other serial antics you can think of. If you are a competitor, try landing on a 10 centimeter disk from 3000 feet.

And after the competition comes one of the most superlative facets of the sport—these are the skydivers' celebrations. You'll have to take my word for it, they are an elevating experience.
